

Home Stretch: David Akers

The creek behind our backyard in Lexington, Ky., was where my older brother and I spent most of our time growing up. Our family of four did a lot together, and it was usually outdoors—playing sports, camping, boating and much more. My parents also took us to church, and when I was 12 years old I accepted Christ. Looking back, though, I didn't live a life that professed Christ. What I said or did wasn't always what my heart told me I should be saying or doing.
