

Worth a Shot

It took all of four days for the spiritual inquest of Allison Whitworth to begin.

On March 5, Whitworth, a goalkeeper in the first-year Women's Professional Soccer League, was riding in the car with some of her FC Gold Pride teammates. The players were just getting acquainted, having started preseason camp on March 1, but it was already evident that Whitworth was different. She was handling the pressure of rapid-fire roster cuts with remarkable poise. Her demeanor was kind. Her language was clean.
