

The Least of These

Ready:

"And the King will answer them, 'I assure you: Whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers of Mine, you did for Me.'" - Matthew 25:40

Set

The oft quoted phrase "walk in another person's shoes" both haunted and motivated me throughout my coaching career. Making an effort to see and understand both sides of issues was a fundamental principle I pursued daily. But only after being challenged to explain how I thought my life would have been different if I had been born into a different family have I uncovered more layers into what that could mean. Trying to feel another's pain is easy to talk about but hard to do. Yet, relationship building depends on exactly that. Christ-like decision making demands that we make that effort to understand, not judge, the behavior of others. Only by honestly caring about the reasons players behaved as they did, and taking into account those reasons before I reacted, could I effectively influence and encourage them to move to a better place. I learned quickly that players don't care how much you know until they know how much you care. Peeling back those layers may be difficult but I am convinced that lasting impact depends on it!

Maybe, just maybe, many of those I worked with everyday were some of those Jesus meant when he said "the least of these." Aren't we coaches offering the hungry something to eat, the thirsty something to drink, the stranger something to belong to, the naked, clothing, the sick, comfort, and those in prison, a visit? And, certainly, there are many other people who fit that description more literally and hence deserve our attention also, but my suspicion is that coaches may be in the middle of that story more than we realize every day.

Go

1. Who are the "least of these" in your life
2. How can you go out of your way to find and help the "least of these" that you don't currently see in your daily life?
3. Is it necessary to make an intentional effort to get out of your comfort zone in order to serve the "least of these" that Jesus is referencing?

Workout

Matthew 19:21 Psalms 41:1 Titus 1: 7-10

Bible Reference:

Matthew 19:21

Psalms 41:1

Titus 1:7-10

Fellowship of Christian Athletes © 2025
8701 Leeds Road | Kansas City, MO 64129 | 800.289.0909
Comments or Questions, fca@fca.org
Privacy Policy | Report a Problem | Copyright

Source URL:<https://fcaresources.com/devotional/least-these>