

Center of Attention

Her name is often stretched across the headlines of sports pages around the nation: Courtney Paris, University of Oklahoma All-American. Of course, it's hard not to talk about an athlete who frequently adds to her growing list of NCAA records, which already stood at an astonishing 16 at the beginning of her senior year.

But unlike many egocentric players who drool at the mention of having their name in print, Paris remains unfazed. Yes, it comes with the territory, but to her it is "irrelevant." She is too focused to get caught up in the hype surrounding achievements. She knows her most significant accomplishments won't ever be listed in press clippings. Rather, they are humbly imprinted on the lives of those she influences.
