

Rocket Man

On the day he became an international sensation, Jeremy Lin feared for his NBA livelihood. Has irony ever been so thick? But then, who could blame him? The previous night hadn't gone well. In the New York Knicks' 91-89 loss to Boston on Feb. 3, 2012, the point guard's statistical line was wholly non-descript: two points, two rebounds, one assist, one turnover and two personal fouls in 6 minutes, 36 seconds of floor time.
